King George Emergency Urgent Care Unit placed into special measures

NOT UP TO SCRATCH!

by Alice Richardson

redbridge@yellowad.co.uk

AN emergency unit at a hospital has been placed into special measures over delays in identifying serious illnesses such as sepsis.

The Emergency Urgent Care Unit (EUCHRE) at King George Hospital in Goodmayes was told it is 'inadequate' in a recent CQC report.

Inspectors highlighted a lack of blood pressure monitors or child oxygen probes in clinical rooms, which meant potentially fatal illnesses were caught late.

They also found doctors were providing higher than necessary medication doses.

Some patients who the inspectors spoke to also claimed they did not always feel they were treated with respect upon arrival at the centre.

The department, which is separate from the hospital's main building and not the same as the A&E, is run by the Partnership of East London Cooperatives, not the NHS.

The rating was based on the planned inspection carried out by CQC representatives in April this year.

The decision means the EUCC will be inspected again within six months and if insufficient improvements have been made, inspectors will take enforcement action and could close the service entirely.

Professor Steve Field, the CQC's chief inspector of general practice, said: "The service will be kept under review and if needed could be escalated to urgent enforcement action.

INADEQUATE: King George Hospital where the Emergency urgent Care Unit has been placed into special measures

"Where necessary, another inspection will be conducted within a further six months, and if there is not enough improvement we will move to close the service by adopting our proposal to remove this location or cancel the provider's registration.

"Special measures will give people who use the service the reassurance that the care they get should improve."

The report did find, however, that some improvements had been made since their last inspection in 2017.

Patients were seen within "an appropriate timescale" and inspectors found action had been taken since their last visit to drive quality improvements.

Dr Shazia Mariam, medical director at PELC said: "This is a disappointing and an unexpected outcome but having being placed into special measures, we will now draw on the additional support available to drive further improvements and make change happen.

"We are disappointed but are pleased to see that many examples of good practice have been recognised and acknowledged in the report.

"As an organisation, patient safety and quality of care remain our top priorities, and we are taking the report very seriously.

"While we know that we have more to do, we are making good progress. We have already made significant changes.

"We will continue to work with the CQC and with our local partners, including commissioners and the Trust, to ensure that the quality of care continues to improve for all our patients."

The PELC GP-out-of-hours service delivered at King George Hospital was recently awarded a CQC rating of 'Good' in an inspection that took place on the same date as the inspection of the EUCC

Arrests over fatal stabbing

A MAN and a teenager have been arrested in connection with the fatal stabbing of Kacem Mokrane in Higham Hill last year.

A man, aged 20, and a 16-year-old male, were arrested on suspicion of murder on Wednesday, August 22. They have since been released on bail to return at a date in late September.

Kacem, 18, of Walthamstow, died on November 20, 2017, from injuries sustained after being stabbed in Mount Pleasant Road on the evening of November 16.

Police were called at 11.15pm to reports of a group of armed males – on arrival Kacem was found suffering from stab injuries.

A post mortem examination at Walthamstow Mortuary on November 24 and gave the cause of death as multiple organ failure following a stab wound.

Detective chief inspector Dave Whellams said: "Kacem was attacked in the street. Our investigation continues to make progress, but I would ask anyone who has information, no matter how insignificant it may seem, to contact my officers - it could prove vital to this investigation."

In November of last year five men were arrested in connection with the investigation on suspicion of murder. All five have since been released under investigation.

Witnesses or anyone with any information is asked to call the Met on 0208 345 3775 or contact via Twitter @MetCC.
